Research Training Program's (IWRH)*

CALL FOR APPLICANTS

Graduate studentship application deadline is March 20, 2009

Post-Doctoral Fellowship and Clinician-Scientist Applications are accepted year round

The IWRH training program is an interdisciplinary training program funded by the Institute of Gender and Health through the Canadian Institutes of Health Research (CIHR). We train graduate students, post-doctoral fellows and clinician-scientists. We are located at the Child and Family Research Institute (CFRI) in Vancouver, British Columbia.

At present there are 11 participating UBC departments with 26 faculty members:

The Department of Obstetrics and Gynaecology
The Department of Medical Genetics
The Centre for Applied Ethics
The Department of Family Practice, Division of Midwifery
The Department of Health Care and Epidemiology
The Department of Medicine
The School of Nursing
The Department of Psychiatry
The Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine
The Department of Psychology
The Department of Environmental Health (SFU)

The IWRH Program provides competitive salary awards to graduate students, post-doctoral fellows & clinical scientists who have been accepted into one of the above participating programs.

Applicants looking to distinguish themselves in a career that will develop, utilize, and translate knowledge in women's reproductive health are encouraged to apply to the IWRH program.

Dr. Wendy Robinson, Dr. Patricia Janssen
IWRH Co-directors
